

You are at the mall with your friend and they forgot their wallet at home. You let them use your debit card to buy a new shirt while you grab food at the food court.

You receive a text asking to confirm your credit card number and information. You click the link and enter your information.

Your credit card bill is $3,000 for this month and the minimum payment required is $60. You pay $60 this month.

You're checking your purchases for this month and see a charge that you did not make. You flag it and report it to your credit card company.

You are really busy this month and forgot when your credit card payment is due. You don't check the due date because you know the late fee is small anyway.

You've been using a credit card for a few years and have built up some airline miles rewards. You decide to use them for your upcoming vacation to New York.

You are on vacation and suddenly realize that you have lost your credit card. You call your credit card issuer immediately.

You see that your credit limit is $5,000 for the month and you realize that means you can spend $5,000!

You keep forgetting your debit card pin, so you change it to a pin that you can easily memorize.

You have been using your credit card for most of your purchases lately, so you decide to track your spending by making a list of your purchases for the month.